

September 19, 2025: On Outstanding Questions About the Death of Regina Santos-Aviles

In a phone interview with KSAT, the family member was adamant that Santos-Aviles' death was an accident, adding that there was a water hose outside of the home.

Who is the family member that was interviewed by KSAT news?
Why are they so 'adamant' that the death was an accident?

I am specifically interested in their use of the 'water hose' as the foundation of their belief.

A close family member told KSAT Investigates Wednesday a relative called emergency services after finding Santos-Aviles on fire outside of her home.

The family member said Santos-Aviles was airlifted to SAMMC in San Antonio to be treated for extensive burns.

Is this the same 'family member' that called EMS 'after finding Santos-Aviles on fire outside of her home?

'The family member said . . .' seems to imply that the person that spoke with KSAT was, in fact, the person that found her and called EMS.

If so, how were they on scene so quickly?

And again, why are they so adamant in this being accidental?

Because of a water hose? How exactly is that relevant? Did this person attempt to utilize this tool? What were the circumstances and timing of their own arrival on scene?
